Synopsis book

431 BC. Greece is torn apart by war. The city states split into leagues: one headed by the militarized Sparta, the other by the sophisticated Athens. Alethea, a young Spartan woman, leaves her home to accompany her brother on the military campaign. Taken prisoner by the enemy and enslaved in an Athenian household, Alethea's heart is set on revenge. However, her feelings are complicated as she is drawn to her abductors' amiable cousin, Eucleides. Meanwhile, Efigenia, a child bride and Alethea's new mistress, struggles to navigate in a world dictated by men. The rigid norms she lives by are consuming her little by little. Can the arrival of the Spartan help her break loose from her chains?

City of Bronze, City of Silver is a tale of bloodshed and vengeance, oppression and love, set against the backdrop of an ancient civilization steeped in myth. Saga Hillbom is the author of three historical novels. Her previous works include A Generation of Poppies and Today Dauphine Tomorrow Nothing.
